

WHAT THEY HAVE SAID:

When NVP was given the Presidential Daily Light Award in 2001, for best community project in the United States, President Bill Clinton stated, "The work of the Non-Violence Project is an outstanding example of what we can do for our fellow citizens through community action"

Knowledge is the best weapon against violence

Increased knowledge about violence, non-violence and the consequences of violence is key in order to create change. In all our efforts we focus on delivering a viable message that in different ways will make people, young or old, aware of what conflicts are all about and in what way you can contribute in our mutual aim to create a better world.

WHY NONVIOLENCE:

Each year over 2 million people worldwide lose their lives to violence. This is the leading cause of death for people aged 15 – 40. For every young person killed an estimated 40 receive injuries that require hospital treatment. Violence places a massive burden on national economies costing countries billions of dollars each year.

THE NONVIOLENCE PROJECT UGANDA - NVP

Mission:

inspiring, motivating and engaging young people in positive change to make their lives and communities safer and healthier

OUR VISION

Creating a meeting place for the next generation leaders with capacity to spearhead peace, conflict resolution, objective leadership and development

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Nonviolence Uganda (NVP) is an internationally well known and respected organization in the field of violence prevention and conflict resolution. NVP's mission is to inspire, motivate and engage young people in positive action to make their lives and communities safer and healthier. NVP has been active since 1993 and some 5 million young people on four continents have taken part in one or more of its 100 educational programs. NVP has also trained thousands of employees in conflict resolution, corporate social responsibility and how to add values to individuals, customers and employees.

We have a strong track record having educated and trained 5 million youth, teachers and sport coaches around the world. Our well documented content is evidence based and most programs are included in our program library.

NVP IN SCHOOLS AND IN SPORTS

To reach our objective of reducing youth violence, the teaching of alternatives is crucial. The platform for this is our education library, which consists of a large variety of evidence-proven programs for teaching violence prevention, life orientation and leadership. The Non-Violence Project violence prevention programs not only bring the knotted gun symbol closer to our main target audience - youth - but also allow both students and teachers to understand and experience our key objectives. Our programs provide the necessary tools for schools to get started and feature a violence prevention and peace education module, including a multimedia resource, training instructions and selected exercises and workshops.

The structured content covers topics such as conflict management, self-esteem, multi-cultural differences, bullying, leadership training, creativity, grief and loss. Constructive methods for initiating a School Ambassador Program, and an education concept to involve sports clubs and federations, are also included in the package.
